

HITLER ADDRESSES REICH AFTER HESS FLIGHT

BRITISH NAVY THWARTS NAZI BOMBING RAID

Repels One of Most Daring
German Torpedo Raids
Of Present War

ARRIVES SAFELY AT EGYPTIAN BASE

Goering's Aces Are Turned Back Six Times By
English Fire

(By Associated Press)
ABOARD THE FLAGSHIP WAR-SPITE WITH THE BRITISH MEDITERRANEAN FLEET, May 13.—Britain's Mediterranean battle fleet, escorted a large war convoy, arrived back at its Egyptian base today after having repelled
one of the most determined Nazi night torpedo bombing attacks of the war.

Fleet Undamaged
The entire fleet, undamaged
despite Italian radio claims to the contrary, splashed leisurely to anchorage with its personnel satisfied that some of Herman Goering German aces had seen more fire than ever before.

Work immediately was started replenishing ammunition supplies
in the event that other bombers over the Mediterranean should test the power of a concentrated anti-aircraft barrage.

Six times Saturday night Nazi planes tried to penetrate one of the heaviest anti-aircraft barrages ever fired from ships. Each time they were turned back by the bursts of flame and metal.

Score after score of shells from 6-inch, 4.5 and 4-inch guns and pom-pom batteries whizzed over the water, aimed at the low-flying targets that were maneuvering desperately to get close enough to shoot torpedoes into the battleships, cruisers and destroyers
of the convoy.

Great Fireworks Display
Aboard this flagship, I saw one of the greatest fireworks display ever belched from naval guns during the 75-minute attack. It made the light of a brilliant moon look like a glimmering star, finally forcing the Luftwaffe squadron to speed to its Sicilian or Libyan bases, dropping torpedoes and bombs harmlessly into the sea.

This was but one operation during a week in which the fleet steadily escorted convoys eastward through the Mediterranean.
In that period fighters of the fleet
air arm shot down a half-dozen German planes, including both German and Italian. Several others were damaged as they sought to approach convoys.

DEBATE PLANS TO HALT SWAMP FIRE

A fire in the vegetable garden swamp land at the rear of the Withers farm north of New Albany continued to burn today as farmers in the vicinity pondered
what steps might be taken to check
it. The marshy ground caught fire several days ago and efforts to stop it have proved unsuccessful.

Although originally a celery swamp, the garden plot has been used in past years for growing other vegetables. The muck land extends into the adjoining George Stuckhouse farm.

Two School Champs Crowned As Mibsters Open Campaign

The annual Salem News marbles tournament for Salem city schools was well under way today with the completion of room and school championships at both Reilly and McKinley schools.

The young marble shooters are aiming for the city championship
and then for the district competition at Canton which will entitle the victor to an all-expense trip to the nationals at Wildwood, N. J., in July.

Little Tommy Stoffer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Stoffer of Roosevelt ave., a student in the third grade at McKinley, romped through to the championship at the big red schoolhouse, defeating six other finalists. And today he will meet in the city finals. He's David Linton, son of Mr. and Mrs.
J. Oliver Linton of Franklin ave.

Dave, a sixth grader at Reilly,
was victorious over three other room champs, Miss Dorothy Smith, principal, announced today. Due to the fact that third graders and under "couldn't shoot across the ring."

Five Juniors at Salem High school were named today as dele-

American Legion-sponsored citizenship school at Columbus, June 14
to 24.

Selection of the quintet was made by officers of Charles H. Carey post No. 56, American Legion, following student nominations by teachers in the Junior home rooms and classes. The Legion post's final decision was made on the basis of reports on the boys' activities and qualifications.

Those selected are:
Homer Asmus, son of Rev. and Mrs. Carl Asmus, S. Lincoln ave.
William Dunlap, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Dunlap, Brooklyn ave.

DONAHEY MAY ASK MAYOR NOMINATION

Possibility of at least a two-way contest for Republican nomination for mayor at the August primary election loomed with reports that
C. S. Donahey, former safety director, may be a candidate.

R. R. Johnson, justice of the peace, already has taken out a petition for the mayoralty nomination.
Donahey, merchant policeman, who served as safety director during George Harroff's two terms as mayor, is said to be feeling out sentiment with a view to entering the race for mayor. He has made no decision as yet, he said today.

On the Democratic ticket Mayor Norman Phillips has made no announcement as to whether he will try for a third term. No other Democrat has been mentioned as a possible candidate.

Party Leaders Rally To Show 'Determined Will for Victory'; Fuehrer's Aid Sane, British Say

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, May 13.—An authoritative source said today that Rudolf Hess' flight from Germany was the voluntary act of a sane man and was carried out in defiance of German authority.

This source declared that Hess brought no peace terms and that his coming to Scotland could not be described as a special mission.
This informant added that Hess knew that if he had gone to a neutral country instead of parachuting onto a Scottish moor, as he did last Saturday night while his Messerschmitt crashed, he would have been in imminent danger of being
"bumped off" by Nazi agents.

Doctors Find Him Sane
Hess has been seen by doctors
who found him sane and healthy, this source said. He was identified by Ivan Kirkpatrick, former British charge d'affaires in Berlin.
The former No. 2 heir-apparent to Adolf Hitler is being treated as a prisoner of war.

Despite the official statement in London that Hess brought no special message, the rumor flood at Glasgow included one that Hess had asserted he possessed certain important information about the German air force which he wanted to communicate to the British.

Authoritative sources here quickly reiterated that this was not true. At the same time it was emphasized that he was not insane.
Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard asserted that if Hitler had wanted to use a peace "ruse" to divide the British people he scarcely would adopt "so clumsy a device"
as parachuting Hess down on British soil.

A rift in Nazidom's inner council's which may have a vital bearing on the outcome of the war was envisioned by Britons as the government sought the real reason behind Hess' fantastic flight from Germany.

Speculation in this astonished nation ran riot over the action of the erstwhile Nazi deputy party leader and member of Adolf Hitler's inner cabinet, who floated down
on British soil with a parachute
after a lone-wolf airplane flight
from the reich.

Removed from Glasgow
It was announced that Hess had been removed from the Glasgow hospital where he was treated for a

PLANS TO ADJOURN BLOCKED BY RULES

Solons Must Act On Min-

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, May 13.—The Ohio
senate wants to close up shop tomorrow, but the house of representatives is not certain that it can complete its work by then.

Without a suspension of the rules to permit a vote on the unemployment insurance and mining safety bills, the house can not get through before Thursday.

Ninety-two votes are required to suspend the rules and take up the two major measures out of order,
and help of the Democratic members would be needed for this.
Whether they would cooperate was problematical.

The senate voted last night to quit work May 14 and adjourn since it may 27. Asset of the house is necessary.

The house judiciary committee
meanwhile recommended for passage the unemployment insurance bill, which has been approved by the senate, and prospects of a fight

No Disunity Suspected Then

Here's one of the latest photographs showing Rudolf Hess with Fuehrer Adolf Hitler before he electrified the world with his flight to Scotland and his subsequent internment by the British. Many observers think Hess suspected another blood purge was imminent in the Nazi high command and that he surrendered himself to the British to gain a comparatively safe haven.

Hess Flight May Confuse Nazi Allies, Writer Holds

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Whatever may prove to be the explanation of Rudolf Hess' flight to Britain there can be little doubt that this incredible incident must create disquiet in the minds of Germany's allies, and the German people, who have accorded Hess a greater respect than any other man
excepting the Fuehrer.

From this fantastic affair one might construct all sorts of plausible theories, one of the easiest to accept being that there has been a rift in the high council of Nazi-dom and that Hess was fleeing in fear of a purge. There is no indication as to whether that might be the answer, but whatever it may be there is nothing which could be more disconcerting to Hitler's followers at home and abroad than Berlin's own explanation.

They tell us that Hess has been ill for many years from a progressive disease, because of which Hitler long ago forbade him to fly.
They say his flight was the act of a man "mentally deranged because of physical illness."

If that be so, how long has Hess
been suffering from brain-storm?
Only recently he appeared with his chief in the Balkans and made a speech. On May day he delivered another address, and on May 4 he sat among the mighty on the platform when Hitler spoke to the reichstag.

Was he suffering from mental derangement then? Has the advice of Hitler's closest friend and second choice for his successor been that of a man mentally deranged? Has his guidance of the German people been affected by this reported disease?

We shall have to await the word
of medical men in Britain before deciding this point.

Crazy or not, Hess apparently wanted to get to England, and he had no intention of returning to the fatherland. Did he flee the wrath of his master, or did Hitler
send him on some mission?

Hess has been closer to Hitler
than any other person, and has exercised a tremendous influence on the Nazi leader.

Always, while showing no ambition himself, Hess has preached the doctrine that Hitler "is the executor of a higher will."

When you consider all these things, and the close relationship between Hitler and his greatest friend, the flight to Britain becomes even more inexplicable.

MULLINS' SALARY GROUP GETS RAISE

Officials of the Mullins Manu-

pay increases for salaried employes
of the Salem plant.

All employes in this group, earning $4,500 or less a year, will receive an increase of $20 a month. The increase will be retroactive to April

Clinic with Mrs. Rolland Coppock,
Miss Ella Beeson and Mrs. R. J.
Starbuck presiding at the table.

Mrs. R. B. Kernohan and Mrs.
Ina Yengling presided at the tea table when tea was served in the roof garden at City hospital. The observance there, arranged by ladies of the hospital board and friends, included a party for children born at the hospital in the last five years.

Student nurses were in charge of the youngsters' affair, held in the nurses' home. Eighty-five children enjoyed entertainment,
refreshments and received favors.
Open house in all departments of the hospital was held.

OFFICERS DISCUSS HIGH RABIES COST

LISBON, May 13.—A special meeting of public health officers and police chief of the county, with the county commissioners will be held here at 4 p. m. Friday to discuss the rabies situation.

The county has expended $27,048
for the serum treatment of 1,288 persons in the past three years, and has exhausted an appropriation of $4,000 during the first four months of this year. Because of budget restrictions the commissioners have called the joint meeting in the hope of placing and enforcing a county-wide quarantine on all dogs, prohibiting their running at large.

(By Associated Press)
BERLIN, May 13.—Close upon Rudolf Hess' flight to Scotland—
with what Nazis called an "hallucination" of German-British peace
—the sub-leadership of the reich met today with Adolf Hitler for a show of "determined will for victory."

Hitler addressed the gathering,
the official party news service said,
but no other details of the meeting were given. In response to the Fuehrer's address, it was said,
"party leaders gave the Fuehrer an impressive demonstration of determined will for victory."

Rudolf Hess "appears to have lived under the hallucination that he was still able to bring about an understanding between Germany and England through personal action with old English acquaintances," a Nazi party communique said today.

"Suffered Physically"

"In fact, as already confirmed
through a report from London,"
the communique said, "he bailed out of a plane in Scotland near a place which he wanted to visit and apparently was found there injured."

"Rudolf Hess, as for years was known in the party, suffered seriously physically and recently resorted increasingly to various aids, mesmerizers, astrologers and so forth."

The flight of national socialist party leader Rudolf Hess was the act of a man "mentally deranged
because of physical illness," authorized Nazi sources declared today.

The 47-year-old Hess, these sources said, was suffering from a long-standing stomach disorder, affliction of the nerves, and consequent sleeplessness. They emphasized, however, that his illness was not mental, but fundamentally physical, with a resultant disturbance of the mental processes.

These spokesmen said "the incident was extremely tragic to Hess and his family personally, but will not have the slightest influence on German military or foreign political policy."

Personal acquaintances of Hess, whom Hitler designated at the start of the war as second heir to leadership of the reich, said Hess suffered hallucinations, but that these hallucinations did not involve a persecution complex.

Gestapo Not After Him

"He was not troubled by any motion the Gestapo or anyone else
was pursuing him," a Nazi spokesman said. "Nothing like a purge of the party or government either was

THERE ISN'T ANY EASY WAY OUT

Apprehension, the diplomatic crime pinned on the late Mr. Chamberlain, is a fancy word for a common weakness. Mr. Chamberlain, as head of the British government, merely did what a lot of his countrymen were doing. They were hunting for an easy way out of a tough predicament, and he tried to help them.

It's almost forgotten now, but still worth remembering, that when he thought he had saved Adolf Hitler and came flying home to say he had fixed up everything for "peace in our time," the people cheered. Everybody cheered. What had looked like the beginning of war had been averted. The round table had scored again. Negotiation. Compromise. They were wonderful. Mr. Chamberlain had found an easy way out.

All that seems a long time ago, and it was. Mr. Chamberlain lost his grip and was replaced by Mr. Churchill, who had made himself unpopular for years by croaking that there wasn't any easy way out of the shambles the new military generation in Germany had prepared for Europe. Mr. Churchill promised his countrymen nothing but blood, sweat, and tears when he took over. That's all they've been getting, too. A few days ago he asked for a vote of confidence after promising more of the same—and got it, 447 to 3. The British evidently have quit believing in fairy tales.

It would be a thrill to believe that all Americans have decided to follow their good example in this era of tough reality. Of all people, Americans should know the price of independence from autocrats. It was only about 150 years ago that their ancestors were paying it with bloodstains on the snow at Valley Forge, and before that their ancestors had paid it in the agony and fear of leaving their homes in Europe to find freedom in a wilderness.

It hasn't been 150 years ago, but virtually every day for 150 years that Americans have known what it meant to keep bigots and fanatics and petty tyrants from gaining the upper hand in the United States. It meant sacrifice, courage, and sometimes violence. Often there were those who thought the game wasn't worth the candle and found it easier to look the other way while religious and racial hatreds flared. There even were some—and there are some now—who could be so little aware of the thing that makes America different that they dreamed of improving it by repealing the Bill of Rights.

The price of freedom is never low. It has been paid with blood, sweat, and tears, the way the British are paying for it now. There are no cut rate sales, no rebates, no coupons, no premiums. The British know that now. So do the French. Americans are learning. They still yearn to find an easy way out of the thing autocracy in Germany has prepared to test the dignity of free men, but the cold truth is beginning to bring them back to the same reality their ancestors never had a chance to ignore—that eternal vigilance and eternal sacrifice are the price of being free.

ON THE HEAD OF A PIN

With rare Yankee ingenuity the 168 hours in each week are being divided up so, the country's whirling machinery can keep whirling practically all the time. The only bottleneck is, of course, the fact that if a man works more than 40 hours he is entitled to a premium of 50 percent on his hourly rate—an arrangement that plays havoc with cost accounting and is, therefore, carefully avoided wherever possible.

The 40-hour week has become one of America's sacred cows. It is observed with almost religious fervor; strong men get black spots in front of their eyes and show signs of swooning as the hands of the clock flit fatefully toward their high-water mark of legal endurance. There even are cases, though rare, where the promise of time-and-a-half restorative if they will but try a little longer is unavailing. Like the one-hoss shay, they fall apart when their hour strikes.

This is an engrossing sociological phenomenon, already being studied carefully for its possible bearing on the history of the world, as in the case of France, where it occurred in a form so aggravated that even the machines, themselves, were forbidden to work more than 40 hours. That proved to be the industrial counterpart of cutting off someone's nose to spite some's face, but the fact was discovered too late to be of any material use to France.

It is argued, with compelling force, that it will be a long time before all the 40-hour stints are allotted to all the people who want them, and it is argued, also with force, that there already is an acute shortage of certain types of labor. Probably in the same way there always have been persons who, tempted to engrave the Lord's Prayer on the head of a pin, have fretted at those who thought they needed either more or less room to do the job right.

The United States is pledged to achieve maximum production within the limits of a 40-hour work week. That is the law. It can be circumvented by paying a penalty of a 50 percent wage increase for all hours above 40, but such is the respect of most Americans for law and cost accounting that they will play on the safe side. Perhaps the official policy is right: If the world can't be redeemed on 40 hours a week the job's hopeless.

GOOD OLD FRED

It had been a long time since any telegraphic news about good old Fred showed up. Fred Perkins—remember? He's the little businessman in New York, Pa., who went to jail for refusing to sign up for the blue eagle back in the days of NRA. Made a big stir at the time. At that, he outlived the blue eagle.

One dose didn't cure him. He's been at it again. Bought back some equipment the other day the internal revenue department was selling at auction to meet Fred's share of the social security tax he'd refused to pay. Story said this was the second time Fred's stuff had been seized for this purpose—also the second time he'd bought it back.

Good old Fred. One hundred percent reactionary. Probably put up to it by somebody. Living in the dark ages. Doesn't know when he's licked. A die-hard. Good old Fred. Long may he rave! When fellows like him play dead there won't be anything to rave about.

THE STARS SAY:

For Wednesday, May 11

ALTHOUGH there may be splendid opportunities for the achievement of some form of public good, perhaps with transportation, communications, writings or speechmaking, yet there are several angles for defeat, opposition or crafty undermining from superiors, elders, friends as well as inimical interests. This may be provoked by impetuous words or acts, inspired by a sarcastic or caustic frame of mind. Such unhappy attitude may enter the domestic or social relations to the detriment of fond hopes and wishes.

Those whose birthday it is may be on the brink of a year of excellent opportunity for growth, expansion, success and happiness even though there are signs of enmity and antagonism coming from employers, superiors, elders, even friends and relatives. Benefits come from decisive self-control in speech, acts and writings, and not from impetuosity and bitterness. And the accent for progress is placed on public relations, group and community welfare.

A child born on this day should have splendid abilities, with much versatility and energy, but may provoke opposition because of its caustic tongue or impetuous nature.

One of the war experts comes right out and says it is Stalin's Oriental mind which makes him such an enigma. Maybe we'd better ask some other Oriental what Joe is thinking.

But there are dreary days when you can scarcely distinguish an optimist from a simpleton.

You can get lots of things free but in the end they usually cost you more than the regular price.

OF INTEREST TO THE YOUNG DIABETIC

Special Care Is Needed, Clendening Says

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A correspondent from Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, writes me that she would be glad to have an article which would include information of special interest and importance to the young diabetic.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

"I believe there may be some things the young diabetic must deal with that differ from the adult, as their bodies are growing and constantly changing. Is this correct?"

The problem of the young person with diabetes is certainly a special one, although with the introduction of insulin in recent years, the situation of the young diabetic is much easier than it used to be.

I am happy to have at hand, in order to answer my correspondent's question, the seventh edition of Dr. Elliot P. Joslin's Diabetic Manual (Lea & Febiger, publishers; 1941). This manual was the first, so far as I know, to be published for the instruction of the diabetic, and Dr. Joslin has always been particularly sympathetic towards the young diabetic.

Severe in Young

Diabetes in the young is very severe; much more severe than in the adult, but it is the experience of all those who specialize in diabetes treatment, that the young are much more amenable to discipline than older patients who come to love their food and the pleasures of the table.

Dr. Joslin has lived long enough to have quite a long-range experience with young people with diabetes. I find in his book, on page 122, a picture of a little tot, 2 years and 11 months of age, who is giving herself an injection of insulin with all the attention to technique that might be expected in a trained nurse. This picture has appeared before in Dr. Joslin's manual, and in the present edition he notes that the child is alive in 1940, eight years later, and doing well.

Another picture shows a girl, photographer in 1929, who is turning a handspring because she feels so well after taking insulin. In 1941, according to Dr. Joslin, she has too important a position to allow of the printing of a picture. Her diabetes has now lasted 15 years and she is well, happy, useful and healthy.

Joslin's Guide

Many of Dr. Joslin's patients have gone through childhood under his care, have grown to adult life, married, and he has pictures of them and their children. In all instances the children are healthy, although Dr. Joslin is careful to insist that a childhood diabetic should marry a non-diabetic mate.

I have known the successive editions of this manual for a good many years and I regard it as probably the best guide for the patient with diabetes. It is based on an enormous amount of experience and is cheerful in tone. There are full instructions about diet, exercise, the proper dosage of insulin, and of protamine zinc insulin. There are food tables and instructions about the care of the feet, the skin, the eyes, and the other points that might cause complications in diabetes.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

J. D. S.—(1) Is Zwiebach or twice baked toast as high in vitamin and caloric content as fresh bread? (2) Is oleomargarine as high in vitamin and caloric content as butter and animal fat? (3) Does secondary anemia ever run into pernicious anemia?

Answer—(1) Zwiebach is higher in protein and fat and slightly lower in starch than bread. There is slightly more nourishment in toasted bread than in white bread on account of loss of water. (2) Oleomargarine is 92 per cent fat, while butter is 84 per cent. Oleomargarine contains very few vitamins. (3) Secondary anemia never runs into pernicious anemia.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E.

Lover Come Back

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

After Kemp and Chris had both left, Sondra turned to her grandfather. "I wonder what ails Kemp, lately?"

"So you've noticed it too? He covers it well, but there's a bottled-up tension underneath. 'Tis as if he watched his heart's treasure slipping away, and he helplessly behind his mask." He darted a sharp look at Sondra. "You haven't been quarreling—the pair of ye?"

"No lamb," she hesitated, then rushed on earnestly. "I like Kemp. Dynamite! He's a perfectly grand person. But there's something—I don't know why, but I just can't get it in me to really love him."

"Humm-m. Me own reactions are similar," the Captain commented dryly. "But—believe the boy's only worried about his fish and Reynall's competition. If that be all, he'll even be restin' easy. I've promised to break Reynall and take his can- and I will."

"Dynamite!" Sondra leaned across the table and spoke with sudden sharpness. "I don't like this way of running a business. It isn't sporting. It—Oh, darling, let me not fight the Reynalls any more. Let's just go ahead and attend to our own business, and have peace."

"Peace! Holy sailor, Sondra, I'm too young a man to be enjoyin' too young a woman!"—a grinning, crept into his voice—"there'd be no peace for me so long as the Glory lies disgraced there, under me nose."

Sondra shook her head at him and, feeling baffled and beaten, turned to the window. Her grandfather would go his way, and there was nothing she could do about it. She knew he never felt the joy of life so completely as when engaged in battle. But, confound it, why had Fate selected Jean Reynall for him to fight with?

That afternoon Sondra left the village and her depression behind her as she turned her spindrift cruiser into the riverlike channel that led to the Forest Man's camp in the Place of Trees.

Sondra swung the Spindrift in between two wooded points, and headed for the small boat-landing at the farther end of the U-shaped cove. As she drew near, she could see a boom of peeled timbers fastened by long ropes to a giant cedar not far from the landing. In the little crescent meadow between beach and forest, lay a pile of foundation logs for the new cabin, and near the big cedar, rising above some alders, was a tiny house on stilts—the cache where provisions were kept. But neither the Forest Man nor his boat were anywhere in evidence. Should she turn back at once or wait, or wait here a few hours on the chance that he might return?

While she hesitated, the decision was taken out of her hands, for the Spindrift gave a sudden lurch, a series of bumps, and came to a stop with mud from her churning propeller boiling up through the green water under her stern.

"Damn it!" cried Sondra, aloud. "I forgot that bar!"

She stopped the engine and with an Indian paddle sounded the depth of water alongside. Barely two feet, and the tide running out for several more hours!

She rolled up the legs of her slacks, piled overboard, and tried to shove the cruiser back into the channel; but the Spindrift was stuck hard and fast.

Hot, breathless, soaked to the waist, she clambered back into the cockpit and considered how many hours it would take the tide to ebb and come in again high enough to float her boat. "Stymied—until after midnight," she concluded.

Searching the lockers for something to help her while away the time, she came on a new harmonica she had bought for Kaitian's small brother, and while the Spindrift slowly settled on its side, she blew in and out until she achieved something faintly reminiscent of "Home, Sweet Home."

A large tepid raindrop splashed on her cheek. By the time she got into her jacket and beret, a steady gentle downpour was silvering the green of the cove.

She considered the possibility of shelter ashore. The only place that offered was the giant cedar above the landing, and to reach it she must wade the narrow channel between the bar and the beach.

"Can do," she decided cheerfully.

She made sure of her boat by slipping a coil of small rope over her arm and, tying one end of it to the Spindrift. Then with trail-ax thrust through her belt and the Indian paddle as a staff, she set forth.

Half an hour later, she had a campfire going under the wide-spreading cedar and enough driftwood piled near it to last for hours. Her slacks, tennis shoes and anklets hung drying on a branch above the fire. There was no wind and not a drop of rain penetrated the heavy green boughs that reached out as far as the creamy blossoms on the elderberry bushes along the creek.

"Cozy!" pronounced Sondra sitting down on her coat and stretching her slender bare legs to the warmth of the fire. "But gosh! I wish I had something to eat!"

She turned a considering eye on the Forest Man's cache. Food was there, if she could climb to the little door, ten feet above the ground. There was no ladder, of course, but nearby lay two slender poles, rough with bark and stubs of branches. Why not drag the poles over to the cache and slant them up to the little door?

It was an unstable device at best, when she got it in place, but with unabated enthusiasm she began creeping up it on hands and knees. Two feet... three... five feet she "cooned," wining as the bark bit into her soft skin. Then, quick as a flash, one of the poles turned, throwing her off balance. The back of her pullover snagged on one of the stiff, spiky stubs as she fell, and she found herself hung there as if on a hook, her toes barely touching the ground.

Her predicament was ludicrous but, she realized, it might also prove serious. She dropped her full weight against the pole, hoping either to tear the pullover or break the stub, but neither gave way, and she speedily resumed her position on tip toe to relieve the pressure against her throat. With forced calmies she was considering what to do next, when her ears caught the welcome rattle-out of a boat's engine at the mouth of the cove. The Forest Man coming back, thank heaven!

Sondra could turn her head enough to see across the narrow meadow to the edge of the forest where he must appear. Almost at once she heard him approaching, whistling something surprisingly modern and gay. She was about to call his name, when her startled eyes told her the man emerging from the trees was not the blond-bearded logger.

He wore a short yellow slicker, white rubber hip boots, a yellow sou'wester pushed back from his dark, beardless face. And the swashbuckling way he wore them made Sondra dimly certain of the man's identity even before she saw the yellow marsh daisy, big as a sunflower, thrust through the buttonhole of his slicker. Jean Reynall—of all people on the North American Continent!

She kept silent, trying to make herself smaller behind the fringe of alders. She wished she could sink into the ground, melt in the rain—anything rather than have him find her, in pullover and satin panties, ridiculously dangling from a pole. The creature had a positive genius for catching her at disadvantage. What was he doing here, anyway?

Her question was answered when he swung down through the meadow to the boom of logs now stranded on the bare beach near the little landing. He went about in a stooped position, closely examining each one. It was not until his inspection was finished that his gaze was caught and held by the Spindrift, careened high and dry on the bar. He took a step forward, then his eyes followed the rope from the cruiser up to the dying campfire, with her slacks dangling from the limb above. With an air of puzzlement he peered anxiously about and at last caught glimpse of her through the alders. His face lighted, and he came toward her on the run.

"Sondra! Gosh, infant, you gave me a scare!" There was no hint that he had noticed her plight or her costume, and the way his eyes went softly brilliant when he looked down at her almost made her forget her grievances against him. "Are you alone here, darling?"

She ignored the endearment and remembered the cut hawser. "No, indeed!" she retorted flippantly. "As you see, I'm completely in the bosom of my family."

He shook his head slowly and grinned. "What a gal!" Then, matter-of-factly he placed a hand under each of her arms, lifted her up until her sweater pulled clear of the impaling stub and dropped her gently back to earth.

She managed a very casual "thank you," and walked to her campfire with all the dignity possible to a barelegged young woman who has just been plucked off a hook by the most exasperating man of her acquaintance.

She was giving rapt attention to rebuilding the fire, when he came rustling up in his oiskins, slapping the sou'wester against his knee to dislodge the rain. "The Forest Man won't be back here for several days, Sondra—he told me so himself—this morning. It's lucky I popped over for a look at the spruce he's getting out for me. The Baltic is waiting for me in deep water on the other side of the peninsula."

"Indeed? Then don't let me detain you Captain," she said politely. He laughed. "I should have said 'waiting for us.' You'll let me take you back to Sitka, of course, and send someone out after the Spindrift?"

"On the contrary, I shall wait right here until the Spindrift floats. And I prefer waiting alone—if that can be arranged."

Jean jammed the sou'wester on his head and without another word, strode back the way he had come.

Her heart sank as she watched the forest shadows close behind him. She hadn't expected him to leave her. She sat looking at the place where he had vanished almost certain he must reappear there, coming back to her. But minutes passed, then the Baltic's exhaust echoed suddenly against the hills.... receded.... gradually faded into silence. He was gone.

That he should coolly abandon her after she had ordered him to do so, seemed somehow a deeper affront than all his former flouting of the O'Moore's. "The brute!" she exclaimed, angrily, and was doubly angered to find herself blinking back tears of unreasonable disappointment. He doesn't care what happens to me. He might at least have argued a little to see if I'd change my mind!"

LITTLE CHATS ON PUBLIC NOTICES

By J. E. Pollard, Journalism Professor, Ohio State University

Giving Notice, and Taking It

Many words, even common ones, have a variety of meanings. One of these words is notice for which, as a noun, Webster gives six definitions. It is often important that several meanings of a word be taken into account even when it is used in a single setting.

This is true of notice, for example in respect to the public notices which are to be found in practically every issue of a newspaper. In this setting the word is two-edged. The mere publication in the notice is to conform to some law which requires or permits the notice to be given.

It is equally important, in all such cases, that notice be taken. Notice that is given but is not seen or heeded is only half a notice and fails to meet the requirements of the situation.

This is why the publication of public notices, or legal advertising,

HOSPITAL SHORTAGE FEARED IN RAVENNA

CLEVELAND, May 13.—A regional defense council on health, welfare and recreation today called for additional hospital facilities in the Ravenna and Sandusky districts, which house Ohio's largest munitions plants.

Recommendations to meet the defense-born problems came before the group as it went into closing sessions of a two-day conference.

Approximately 8,000 persons will be employed at the $30,000,000 Ravenna arsenal upon completion and about 1,500 at the Sandusky TNT plant.

Some of the arsenal workers will commute from nearby cities or will be taken from Ravenna's labor supply, but others will be imported. The influx of new workers will create a housing problem and overtax hospital facilities, said Robert C. Goodwin, coordinator for the regional council embracing Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky.

The influx also threatens to crowd public schools in the two cities and their suburbs.

Frequently parents ask us when their children should change from high shoes to Oxfords. We tell these parents exactly what we're about to tell you. We quote a famous foot specialist—Up to the age of four, it is advisable for children to wear a high shoe, regardless of whether they have normal feet or weak feet. Up to this age a child's foot and leg muscles require the support and balance of a high shoe! Let us also advise proper infant shoes!

Expecting a Baby?

Mother's Friend helps bring ease and comfort to expectant mothers.

MOTHER'S FRIEND, an exquisitely prepared emollient, is useful in all conditions where a bland, mild anodyne massage medium in skin lubrication is desired. One condition in which women for more than 70 years have used it is an application for massaging the body during pregnancy. It helps keep the skin soft and pliable, thus avoiding unnecessary discomfort due to dryness and tightness. It refreshes and tones the skin. An ideal massage application for the numb, tingling or burning sensations of the skin. For the tired back muscles or cramp-like pains in the legs. Quickly absorbed. Delightful to use.

Highly praised by users, many doctors and nurses. Just ask any druggist for Mother's Friend—the skin lubricant. Try it tonight.

League Leaders Play At New York And Cincinnati Today

INDIANS, DODGERS OPEN AGAINST TWO "TEAMS TO BEAT"

Reds and Yankees Each In Fourth Place Due To Batting Slump

(By Associated Press)

The heaviest pressure in the major leagues today is not on the first-place clubs. It is on the world champion Cincinnati Reds and the once invincible New York Yankees, both of whom are in fourth place in their respective leagues and virtually at the crossroads of the pennant trail.

Their predicaments are strangely similar. Each has lost five of its past seven games. Each has had trouble rounding out its pitching staff. Each has been in a batting slump. Each will be at home today and tomorrow for a two-game series with the league leaders—the Brooklyn Dodgers at Cincinnati and the Cleveland Indians at New York.

Reds Defeated

The Reds were humiliated 12-1 yesterday by the Chicago Cubs and left staggering on the fringe of the second division in a fourth-place tie with the Boston Braves.

The Dodgers, on the other hand, have won five in a row and 20 of their past 23 since getting off on the wrong foot against the New York Giants. The St. Louis Cardinals also have righted themselves after losing three straight in the east and as the result the Reds not only are 8½ games out of first place, but are seven full games away from second.

Cards Take Pittsburgh

The Cardinals conquered Pittsburgh again yesterday, 6-2, with a 13-hit attack and the smooth, seven-hit pitching of Lon Warneke. It was the fourth victory without defeat for the veteran right hander.

The Yankees were whipped, 8-4, by the Boston Red Sox with old Lefty Grove spacing 10 hits for the 25th triumph of his career and his second of the season. The Sox made only eight blows, but bunched five with a half-dozen walks by Lefty Gomez for all of their runs in the first three innings. Jimmie Fox hit a homer with two on in the first inning.

Cloudy Indians Lost to Yankees

The only Yankee victories in their past seven contests were two surprise conquests, last week at Cleveland when the Indians still had their heads in the clouds from an 11-game winning streak. Bob Feller was to try to avenge one of those defeats today.

The Washington Senators subdued the Philadelphia Athletics, 5-1, in yesterday's only other major league encounter. Dutch Leonard pitched six-hit ball for his third straight success. Washington's eight timely hits included a homer by Jim Vernon.

Grate Ladies League Prizes Awarded at Annual Banquet

Climaxing a highly successful bowling season, in which 94 women took part, the Grate Ladies League members held a banquet last night at the Lape hotel, reviewed the season, heard reports, distributed prize awards and elected officers for next year.

Mrs. James Groner presided during the short business session, and made the prize awards.

The Ford V 8's finished in the top berth, with Brownies as runners-up and Polkys third. The Fords captured top money for team high single game, with Endres-Gross second and Finneys third.

High three-game honors also went to the Fords with Endres-Gross second and Damascus Lumber third.

Breezy Briefs Of Sport From Brietz To You

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, May 13.—(The Special News Service)—Broadway newsreel crowds applaud every time Hank Greenberg is shown in an army uniform. When and if Ty Cobb and Babe Ruth meet in that golf match, the old Bam probably will remind Ty of the time he struck out Cobb, Sam Crawford and Bobby Veach of the Tigers with the bases loaded.

Freddy Corcoran, who knows his golf onions, takes Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., as a real dark horse in the National open. This 20-year-old turned pro in the Greensboro open and finished in the money. Last week he tied Clayton Heafner for first place in the Carolina open, then won the play-off by firing a 64 to Heafner's 69.

Today's Guest Star

Roy Shult, Troy (N. Y.) Times-Record. "Does it strike you as odd how the big boys are bowing out in order?" First it was Babe Ruth, wearing No. 3... then Lou Gehrig, No. 4... Last week it was Hank Greenberg, No. 5... No. 6?"

The Sports Parade

Up in Boston they refer to Joe DiMaggio merely as Dom DiMaggio's brother. Eddie Rickenbacker is writing friends he positively will attend the Indianapolis 500-mile race and that's great news for all. George Abrams, Ken Overlin's stablemate, will headline the Army-Navy boxing show Gene Tunney is staging Saturday at Jacksonville. Larry MacPhail is so high on television he is toying with the idea of piping the World's series into a half-dozen Brooklyn theaters if the Dodgers are in there, of course.

Today's True Story

Two weeks ago a friend long-distanced Hank Greenberg from Honolulu. He said: "You've got to have more power if you're going to start hitting homers." I'm sending you four cases of pineapples." Last Tuesday the pineapples arrived. And on Wednesday Tank hit his first two homers of the year.

It All Happened Here

Johnny Riemenschneider, pitching for the Whittens (Ia.) Highs, whiffed 21 batters in a seven-inning game to win 16-0. Just to rub it in, he homered, doubled and singled. Don't look now, but 55 runs have been piled up against the Emory and Henry baseballers in their past two games. And this paradox may interest you: The Arizona State Bulldogs have won the Border Conference football title two years in a row and both times met an Eastern team in Sun Bowl games, but still haven't been able to lick the red ink. Even the college stationery is lettered in red.

Oh, Oh;

And now it's the fans of Idaho Falls, Idaho, who are wondering if Brooklyn is still in the league. One of the papers out there completely ignored the Brooks in the National league standings the other day, but put the Giants in twice.

One-Minute Interview

Umpire Larry Goetz: "I saw the Soose-Overlin fight. Never again will I ever need be ashamed of any decision I make on the ball field."

BAPTISTS, ST. PAUL RECORD VICTORIES IN CHURCH LEAGUE

Games Mark Class B Openers; Mullins and Trades Win In Class A

Church league openers at Centennial park last night saw the St. Paul's Youths win over the Christians, 14-13, and the Baptists defeat the Y. P. C. C., 9-8. Highlight of the evening's play was Don Freed's homer in the last of the seventh which won the game for the Baptists.

Class A winners at the park were Mullins, with a 6-5 victory over the Sanitary, and the Trades class, who recorded a 9-6 triumph over the Carroll club. Vito Guappone hurled for Mullins, allowing the Sanitary only two safe hits. One of these was a drive by Jim Smith in the first inning which cleared the bases of two men who had previously walked.

FELLER, HARDER HURL FOR TRIBE

Peckinpugh Will Not Use Southpaws Against Yankees

NEW YORK, May 13.—The Cleveland Indians dropped out of the "Beat-the-Yankees-with-Southpaws" club in selecting Bob Feller to face the New Yorkers today and Mel Harder tomorrow. Bothe are right-handers.

The biggest factor in Manager Roger Peckinpugh's choice was the rough treatment the Yankees gave Al Milnar and Al Smith, Cleveland's top porters, in beating the Indians twice last week.

The tussles here open a 10-game eastern stand for the Redskins, who now sport a two-and-a-half-game margin over second-place Boston.

The Yankees called on Marius Russo, a curve-ball southpaw, to open the series.

Roy Weatherly was slated to return to center field, bringing another shakeup in the batting order. He has recovered from a shoulder injury suffered in crashing into a wall in St. Louis.

Roy takes over the lead-off spot again, with Lou Roudreau dropping to second. Gerry Walker to third and Ken Keltner to sixth.

The Indians came east with their squad pared to the regulation 25 players. Pitcher Nate Andrews was optioned to Milwaukee of the American association, leaving the club with 10 pitchers, seven outfielders, six infielders and two catchers.

Reds Shellacked 12-1 By Chicago

CINCINNATI, May 13.—You can usually depend on the world champion Cincinnati Reds to get one run in a game, but you can't always make the other team get along on none.

That seems to be the main difficulty as the Brooklyn Dodgers bustle out for their first series on the home grounds of the team that made them postpone all their hopes and desires last year.

It seems that if Bucky Walters is to get his fifth victory of 1941, which, as baseball seasons go, is getting along fast he must do it with a shut-out. However, he has no guarantee that Hugh Casey, the Dodger hurler for the day, can't hang the same thing on the Reds.

Bucky Only Winner Over Dodgers

Hugh is one of a number of Brooklyn pitchers who have beaten the Reds resoundingly this year, and Bucky is the only Red hero who has beaten Brooklyn. That took 11 innings.

It was also well demonstrated yesterday that one run is not enough to win a game, especially when the other team, the Chicago Cubs in this particular instance, scores an even dozen.

It was also well demonstrated that Monte Pearson who never lost a World series game for the New York Yankees, at least not now.

Fearson Allows Seven Runs. Monte didn't stay in long enough of course, for any seasoned judgments to be formed. With one out in the second, Monte retired after giving the Cubs seven runs, enough to win many a game here.

What with five bases on balls and some inept ball-handling by the Cincinnati defense, the Cubs simply helped themselves and tossed in a couple of hits just to show that it wasn't a gift.

DEMANDS STUDY OF DEFERMENT PLAN

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, May 13 — Declaring the selective service headquarters was "not going to grant anything down our throats," Chairman May (D-Ky.) of the house military committee, called today for a thorough study of a proposal to defer older registrants from the call to arms.

May advocated a "go slow" policy on all proposed changes in the Selective Service Act.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy draft director, yesterday recommended an amendment which would permit the President to order deferments by age groups without removing the liability of those deferred from eventual military service.

Hershey, writing to Speaker Rayburn, did not suggest an age at which group deferment might start but informed officials said there had been considerable official discussion of postponing the training of all those 31 years old and over.

May's attitude indicated that congress might not make any change in the statute prior to the expected second registration on July 1. Youths turned 21 since last October will be required to register at that time, under present plans.

feared by Hess or is in the offing." Meanwhile, Adolf Hitler himself took over personal direction of the National Socialist party which Hess had led as the Fuehrer's deputy. Hitler changed the designation of the office, formerly known as the "office of the deputy of the Fuehrer," to the "party chancellery." Martin Bormann, who has been director of that office, remained in charge.

The manner of Hess' flight from Germany in itself was evidence of mental instability, it was asserted. "If he were merely running off to England a mentally competent man would have landed as soon as he reached the British coast," an informed spokesman said.

"Instead of that he flew many miles across British territory in a Messerschmitt 110 which every child in England recognizes as a hostile machine."

"Then he landed at Glasgow, which is a remote city and not a logical objective for a man who was seeking asylum."

"The German attitude must be that it is a clear case of deviation from normal mentality."

"In this connection his intimate acquaintances recall the superstitions to which he was prey. They cannot reconcile with a normal attitude his interest in astrology, palmistry and exotic forms of medical treatment."

Bergman says he's walked a mile for each birthday anniversary since he was 16 and claims to have covered 255,000 miles on various excursions, including one trip to the New York World fair.

Honesty Wins
RICHMOND, Va.—For 63 years an individual who as a boy broke a window in a school here wrestled with his conscience.

Finally at the age of 73 he visited Supt. Jessie Binford to pay for the damages—only to have the school head rule that the money could not be accepted because of the "Statute of Limitations."

Welcome Welcome
KANSAS CITY—A feminine music lover saved the day for Lawrence Tibbett.

The singer strode smilingly toward a crowd in the Union station only to discover its interest was in Lord Halifax, the British ambassador, who arrived on the same train.

One woman, however, greeted Tibbett with: "I don't care about the Halifaxes. They can't sing the way you do."

"Shake hands, lady," the baritone replied. "And I really shake hands."

NEW YORK COUPLE KILLED IN CRASH
Mail Plane Leads Searchers To Mangled Craft In Mountains

70 planes were hunting the missing couple when an All-American Aviation airmail pilot made the discovery on his regular flight. Searchers were directed to the remote scene by air.

The Brewster Beechcraft had struck the top of the 1,800-foot Shade mountain 25 miles south of this central Pennsylvania town snapping off tree tops, piling up nearly 100 feet of ground and finally bursting into flames.

Coroner Charles W. Straub, declaring the deaths accidental, said the ship would have cleared the treacherous mountain with 160 feet additional altitude. He fixed time of the crash at 5:30 p. m. Friday.

Brewster, 35-year-old experienced pilot and associate of a New York investment firm, and his wife, the former Leonie Debarry Lyon, had left Roosevelt field only a few hours previously on a six-hour hop to visit friends at Warren, O. Investigators said they apparently got off their westward course and were heading east when the crash came.

RUDOLF HESS SANE, BRITISH DECLARE

Hitler Aid Is Examined By Doctors; Removed From Glasgow

broken ankle suffered in his leap, but his whereabouts was kept secret.

Whatever the motive behind Hess' flight, there was general agreement here that the astounding event would be of aid to the British war effort.

Informed sources expressed belief that the most important aftermath of Hess' action would be its effect on the morale of the German people.

"The defection of a leader whom the German nation was taught to respect and honor will be almost impossible to explain to the German people," one commentator declared.

He expressed doubt that the German public would accept at its face value an official statement hinting that Hess was suffering from a mental disorder.

The explanation advanced by some sections of the press—and generally regarded here as the most logical—was that Hess had fallen out of favor with the Fuehrer and had fled in fear that he might be the victim of another purge.

Details of Hess' arrival in Scotland were disclosed late last evening in an unvarnished communique issued to newspaper correspondents at the ministry of information, where high British officials had gathered amid undisguised excitement.

The facts outlined in the official statement were simple:

On Saturday night, British patrols reported that a Messerschmitt 110 fighting plane had crossed the coast of Scotland headed toward Glasgow. A short time later a plane of the same type crashed near Glasgow. A German officer who had bailed out was found by a farmer in a nearby field, suffering from a broken ankle.

"The officer was taken to a hospital in Glasgow where he at first gave his name as Horn but later declared he was Rudolf Hess," the communique said.

The ministry of information announced later it had established "beyond all possible doubt" that the officer actually was Hess.

The ministry did not say specifically that Hess had deserted, but it made three observations of seeming significance.

1.—That Hess, to establish his identity, had brought photographs taken of himself at various times.

2.—That he had arrived in a plane which could not possibly carry sufficient fuel for a return trip to Germany.

3.—That the Messerschmitt's guns were unloaded.

These facts all seemed to the British to tell a story of hasty flight which the German version of Hess' departure did nothing to break down.

DUCE'S BATTLESHIP IS BELIEVED SUNK
ABOARD A BRITISH MEDITERRANEAN FLAGSHIP, May 13.—Italy's powerful 35,000-ton battleship Vittorio Veneto is generally believed by the British to have been sunk.

Frequent British aerial reconnaissance over Italian seaports since the Battle of Matapan March 28 have failed to disclose any trace of the vessel.

The apparent failure of Italian radio broadcasts to refer to any return to port by the battleship after the Battle of Matapan strengthens this belief.

on use floor diminished when organized labor said it would go along.

The mine safety bill, however, is still tied up in the judiciary committee, although some members said a compromise suitable to both employers and labor would be reported out probably late today. This measure, too, has been passed by the senate.

Meanwhile, the senate-house conference committee is still negotiating on the $352,800,000 biennial appropriation bill. Republican leaders said its report would be brought up for action when the two houses dispose of other important matters.

House at Work
The house returned to work today, after the weekend recess, to take up a 15-bill calendar including the senate-approved proposal to prohibit the sale of cigarettes at less than cost plus six per cent.

Before the senate was a bill to create a retirement system for state highway patrolmen.

The senate last night added its approval to a conference report on the uniform traffic code, completing enactment.

Sen. Maurice W. Lipscher (D-Mahoning) opposed the bill, declaring it contained many "honest mistakes."

The bill, he said, would provide a "picnic" for constables because of the numerous regulations it imposes on motorists. One would require an automobile driver to open his window or door and listen for a train whistle when he came to a railroad crossing.

The senate gave final approval to another measure authorizing the payment of pensions to bind persons more than 65 years of age.
